外国語（英語） 601 その1

第1問 次の英文を読んで、下線部(1)～(4)を日本語に直しなさい。星印*の語句は下に「注」があります。

Daniel Neal figured he was onto something when his four-year-old daughter mastered his mobile phone. (1)He liked the idea that as Eleanor* grew older, he would have an easy and spontaneous way to keep in touch with her. But as he watched mobile computing becoming cheaper, more ubiquitous and more powerful, he, like every parent, was concerned about how his daughter would negotiate this brave new world. Would she be safe? Would she become a texting addict at the expense of her studies and the family budget?

As CEO* of e-learning company VCampus, Neal spent a lot of time on the road and saw what wireless services for kids were available in other countries. Most offered a dumbed-down version of an adult phone. “(2)It occurred to me how smart my kids were and how they were not going to be satisfied with four-button baby phones. Kids can use BlackBerrys* better than many adults. I decided there would be a very big market for a mobile services company built from a kid’s point of view.”

Even chance encounters with kids turned into focus groups. Once, while in an airport, the partners flipped open their mobile phones in preparation for a meeting. A group of tweens* on a field trip were fascinated. “All these kids started asking us questions, and their chaperones* and mums were expressing their concerns about texting and bills. (3)One thing I’ve come to learn is that there are maybe only one or two children left in America who don’t want a mobile phone,” says Neal.

Kajeet* launched last March, and its subscriber list is growing fast. It’s a full-featured phone with voice mail, games, Internet access, navigation services, and text, picture and instant messaging.

(4)Parents can set a “curfew” so kids can’t chat and text during school, but in the event of an emergency, parent and child can always reach each other. Parents can also control who can call or text the phone (so bullies can be blocked!) and turn features on or off via the Web at any time. The popular virtual wallet manager allows families to decide who pays for the calls home or to the best friends, and kids learn to budget their phone allowance. An added bonus: It’s a pay-as-you-go* service, so there are no fees or contracts.
